...to benefit congenital heart patients

PURPOSE AND BACKGROUND

The purpose of this event is to raise funding for local families of congenital heart patients to help with medical bills and other associated costs not covered by their private health insurance. Money collected will help families that have health insurance but do not qualify for many of the programs designed to aid in the unexpected and substantial financial burden related to pediatric heart conditions. With this event, we will be supporting the average family who desperately needs a gesture in ensuring their little fighters receive the medical care they so desperately deserve.

Cooper is a 11-year-old Lawrence resident who has undergone three open heart surgeries and multiple other procedures to correct and repair three separate heart defects and faces surgeries in the future. At six months of age, though underweight for the procedures, Cooper's deteriorating health made it necessary to move forward with his second open heart surgery. The results have been positive, but there were many setbacks and struggles along the way. Cooper's heart was not strong enough to beat on its own after the repairs were made and he was placed back on a bypass machine where he remained for several days. The resulting three + weeks in the pediatric intensive care unit (PICU), prior to another week of regular pediatric unit hospitalization, resulted in staggering medical bills which were not entirely covered by the family's private health insurance. This great community stepped forward and raised enough money to almost completely alleviate the family's medical burdens at that time.

The family, longtime Lawrence residents and small business owners, were deeply determined to help ease the financial burden of other families in similar situations. Cooper's Cause Foundation was established in October 2008 and has now aided twenty-nine needing families with funds totaling over $100,000. Proceeds raised on behalf of Cooper's Cause Foundation are passed on to those in need.
